LEGAL DEFENSE COMMAND PACIFIC
PERSREP INTAKE FORM
REMOTE SERVICE CONFIDENTIALITY DISCLOSURE

It is the policy and practice of Legal Defense Command (LDC) that the confidentiality of all client information and related matters is protected in every possible manner and at all times. Individuals who seek legal services from LDC do so under an attorney-client relationship that is limited in duration and scope to specific and discreet legal matters. Our professional and ethical obligations require us to ensure confidentiality is protected. All personnel assigned to LDC fall under this confidentiality requirement and may NOT discuss any matters outside of the office, including the names of prospective, actual or former clients, specific legal matters that an individual is seeking assistance for, and any specific matter or outcome that may occur in an individual case, unless authorized to do so with the client's permission or otherwise authorized under the law.

I understand this means that while I am receiving legal defense services via remote means (i.e., telephonically, Defense Connect Online (DCO), e-mail, or other means not conducted face-to-face in an LDC office), the above confidentiality also applies. I further understand that the use of technology to communicate with LDC personnel carries an inherent risk of third party interception. Although LDC will take all reasonable measures necessary to ensure privacy in remote attorney-client communications, LDC cannot guarantee privacy as remote communications rely upon providers outside of the Department of Defense (i.e., cell phone signals/providers, NMCI or commercial internet provider, or any other electronic medium).

I also understand if any unauthorized or nonessential third party is present or can overhear any portion of the conversation, confidentiality and the applicability of the attorney-client privilege may be compromised. In other words, parties outside of LDC are not bound by ethical rules to maintain the confidence of the communication and could potentially testify regarding what they have intercepted. This includes Region Legal Service Office (RLSO) personnel working adjacent to LDC remote offices.

By signing below, I acknowledge that I understand this disclosure and have had the opportunity to discuss this with an LDC attorney before commencing any confidential discussions. I consent to receiving legal advice by remote, electronic means and that LDC will take all precautions within its control to ensure the confidentiality of our communications.

While all of your communications with the attorney concerning this matter will remain confidential, the formation of any attorney-client relationship will extend only so far as the current PERSREP situation and will not extend to any future administrative or criminal proceeding without necessary authorization.
